THE OLD COLONY HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

The Old Colony Historical Society was incorporated May 4, 1853.

“The objects of the Society are to preserve and perpetuate the history of the Old Colony in Massachusetts, and to collect, hold and preserve documents, books, memoirs and other matters relating to its history.”

The Society's stated and quarterly meetings are held in Historical Hall, now owned by the Society, and its valuable collections of books and relics are contained in its recently erected library annex, which is a place of safe deposit. The records of its proceedings are already partly published in six collections. Nearly seven hundred members, life, resident, corresponding and honorary, are enrolled upon its register.

The work of the Society is conducted under the management of a board of directors which is chosen annually. Its annual income is derived chiefly from its regular fees, and its future prosperity and material growth must largely depend upon the encouragement which it shall receive from the co-operation and bequests of its members.

The annual membership is $4.00 per year. The life-membership is $10.00.

PORTRAITS AND PICTURES.

WASHINGTON. The portrait of Washington was presented to the Old Colony Historical Society by the directors of the Bristol County Bank, Sept. 19, 1896.

Some years later the society had it cleaned, rebacked, and the old mahogany frame gilded at an expense of about two hundred dollars.

It was painted by James Sullivan Lincoln, (see number 41) a native of Taunton, after Stuart's Washington at Newport, R. I.

17 CHARLES RICHMOND. Son of Thomas Richmond and his wife, Elizabeth (Fales) Richmond; born in Dighton March 11, 1809. He was the great grandson of Colonel Sylvester Richmond, colonel in the 16th Massachusetts Battalion in the campaign against Louisburg in 1745, who received the French flag at the surrender of the fortress; grandson of Colonel Ezra Richmond; aide to his father in 1745, who received from the hands of King George a captain's commission in the British line, which he held until he became the senior officer in the British army.

Charles Richmond was the junior partner in the firm of "Crocker & Richmond," (see number 25) and gave to this business firm all his energy. In the commercial world of New York, Baltimore and Philadelphia, while their course glowed with prosperity, his presence was ever the signal for some fresh enterprise, and the commission houses bowed in adoration to this lord of cotton and iron. The financial revolution of 1837 involved this firm beyond recovery, and Mr. Richmond, hunted like a beast of prey by his remorseless creditors was obliged to leave his native state, and died in Sacramento City, California, Dec. 14, 1849.

Presented by his son,

Captain Henry Richmond.

18 ALBERT FIELD. Son of Jude Field and his wife, Abigail (Carpenter) Field; born in Taunton July 4, 1795; commenced shoe nail business in Taunton in 1827 which developed into the "Field Tack Works" of world wide reputation. Died April 25, 1869.

Presented by N. Bradford Dean.

19 Mrs. ABIGAIL TISDALE TRECSCOTT. Only daughter of Simeon Tisdale and his wife Abigail Tisdale, and wife of Samuel Trescott, a native of Dorchester. She lived in the "Trescott House," west corner of Trescott street, long known as the fire-proof building, having escaped three destructive fires. Her home was the abode of hospitality and was the scene of merry making of kindred and friends; from this home went forth often and with kindly spirit the "widow's mite." Her husband died in Taunton, July 6, 1797, and she remained a widow for more than a generation. Died May 1, 1833.

Presented by E. Dawes Tisdale.

20 JOSEPH DEAN. Son of Robert Dean and his wife Susan Leavitt (Padelford) Dean. Born Nov. 16, 1819. A flour and grain merchant at the Weir. This building is evidence of his great philanthropy, built for a Union Chapel, wherein those having no other place of worship might find here a home, and largely through his influence it came into the possession of the Old Colony Historical Society. Died Aug. 16, 1888.

A member of the legislature; an author of religious books and a poet whose verses were esteemed of high order. Many of his hymns were copied and used in church books. Editor of the "Beacon of Liberty"; one of the original organizers of the Winslow church. Died Dec. 19, 1856.

Presented by his son Edgar H. Reed.

25 Hon. SAMUEL CROCKER. Son of Capt. Josiah Crocker and his wife Abigail (Leonard) Crocker. Born Aug. 2, 1772. Town and County treasurer for twenty-five years. Representative 1809-13. Senator 1813-17. Councilor under Gov. Brooks. But it was as a manufacturer that he was most distinguished, having been for a long course of years the senior partner, first in Crocker, Bush & Richmond and afterwards of Crocker & Richmond, (see number 17) which by the large amount of capital employed and extensive business operations procured for Taunton in the earlier part of the last century the reputation of being one of the largest manufacturing towns in the United States. The extensive manufacturing establishment of the "Calico Print Works" of Taunton dates back to a period prior to anything of the kind in the country. At that date Taunton claimed the earliest and best herrings; the best brick; and the first and best iron works; and before a single stone had been laid in Lowell for a similar enterprise the firm of Crocker & Richmond had received for their fabrics in 1826 a medal for promoting manufactures and mechanical arts. Died April 3, 1853.

Presented by Mrs. S. C. Cobb

and Mrs. Curtis Guild.

49 THOMAS CORAM. Born at Lyme-Regis in Dorsetshire, England, in 1668; came to Boston in 1693. In 1699 the subject of this portrait (by Hogarth.) came to Taunton and purchased in the south purchase the site for a ship yard, and there he commenced ship building. In 1700 his yard and two vessels were seized in execution for debt, and judgment pronounced against him. He related his afflictions to Captain Thomas Leonard, and through him the case was retrieved, and the property and land of the deputy sheriff who had in the former case unjustly seized the ship yard were levied upon, and fifty nine acres were allowed Mr. Coram for damages. This fifty nine acres of land he conveyed by deed to Kings Chapel in Boston with the proviso that if ever hereafter the inhabitants of Taunton should be more civilized than they now are and if any should incline to have a Church of England built among them, the vestry men of Kings Chapel have authority to grant any part or parcel of this land to them. This was never done, but in 1742 Coram forwarded to St. Thomas Church several books, among which a bible and book of common prayer are now in possession of that society. Two copies of his books are in the archives of this society. Coram remained in Taunton and Boston ten years, and in the ten succeeding years by unwearied solicitation he obtained a charter for a foundling hospital for exposed and neglected children. His name is immortalized by Dickens, in his "Little Dorrit" in the person of the warm tempered and equally warm hearted Tatty-Coram. He died March 29, 1751, aged 84 years.

145 The Panel Picture of Taunton Green. The origin of this representation, according to tradition, is this: A painter boarding at the "Porter Inn," then situated on the site of the Mason building, south side of City square, transferred this view of the "Green" to the panel over the old-fashioned fire-place. When this building was removed in 1851 the panel was carefully removed and remained for years in the office of S. Williams, Esq., whose son S. A. Williams donated it to this society. This picture represents the last of the ancient training field of the first settlers of Taunton, surrounded by buildings none of which remain to-day.

A native of Taunton many years ago wrote the following upon Taunton Green:

"In former as in recent times it has been the principal arena of chivalric military display in the town, the amphitheatre whereon the athlete and gladiator have shown their prowess in the peaceful and sportive exercise of their skill,—the rostrum upon which have been elevated to the public gaze patriots, sages, orators, and reformers; and where even poets with frenzied eye have pierced the sky and hearts of listening multitudes with the outpourings of their souls; the warm battle-ground of opposing and nearly equal political foes; where the great interests of peace or war, embargo or no embargo, federalism or republicanism, "Adams and liberty," were openly and ardently discussed; where flashing eye, the lip of scorn, the heated breast and angry blow often followed the tumult of the bosom. The well remembered scene of rejoicing where stood the herald of peace in February 1815 as pure as untrodden snow beneath her feet, holding the olive branch aloft in the undimmed lunar effulgence. The quick hurrah as rapid and moving as the wild cry of the Cossack, "three times three," and again as parties fraternized or separated under leafy bowers and on the bright lawn, year after year a generation since made glorious the commemoration of Independence on Taunton Green."

146 Landing of the Norsemen. From the easel of George Anthony Shove, Dighton, son of Capt. Anthony Shove and his wife, Abby (Bowen) Shove. Born at Newport, Nov. 8, 1826; died at Dighton, Sept. 28, 1890.

Presented by David B. Shore.

147 Cromwell Refusing the Crown—with chart. This historic picture represents a distinguished body of Englishmen, whose likenesses were taken from original portraits, and includes the likeness of Gen. Walley, designated on the chart, the brother of the wife of Rev. William Hooke, the first minister of Taunton.

Presented by Governor Joseph Hartwell Williams, Maine.

148 St. Mary Magdalen Church, Taunton, England. Built prior to 1308. It is one of the most magnificent and largest of parish churches, having a nave, a chancel, and fine lofty tower at the west end. The tower was erected by King Henry VII; the height 120 feet; the pinnacles 32 feet; total 153 feet. It has six deep-toned bells with chimes. Organ built 1709.

Presented by His Worship, Hon. William W. Wrenn, Mayor of Taunton, England.

149 The Birth-place of Elizabeth Pole, Chard, England, in 1589. In 1637 a plantation was made by her at Tetequet, now a part of Taunton. Dux femini facti upon our city seal renders recognition of her settlement.

Old Toby. The cannon in front of Historical Hall was owned by Tobias Gilmore, whose native name was Shilbodee Turry-Werry, the son of an African chief. Sold at auction on the slave-block at Newport, by Capt. John Gilmore, he was brought to the home of his master. During the war of the Revolution he offered to go into the service in place of his master in exchange for his freedom. His service is recorded in the Mass. state archives. Under General David Cobb he entered the military family of Washington as a servant, and on his discharge this cannon was given him for his faithful services. In after years, on the 4th of July, he would bring this cannon to Taunton Green and fire it, once for each of the thirteen states, and once more for "Marsa Washington."

Indian Tomahawks, Arrow Heads and Stone Implements. This collection of Indian implements of war and peace were all gathered from the ground in the Old Colony, and were made and used by the Wampanoag Indians.

Presented by Capt. Giles L. Leach, Joseph Dunbar, Henry S. Hart, Marshall B. Baker and John H. Eddy.

Stone Mortar. The stone mortar in front of Historical Hall was used by the Indians for beating corn into meal by a stone pestle. It was brought from Tiverton, and found near the wigwam of Weetamoe, the squaw-sachem of the Pocasset Indians, whose head in 1676, being severed from her body, was placed on a pike-staff on Taunton Green.

Head-stone of Grave. This head-stone marked the grave of Edward Babbitt, who was killed by the Indians June, 1675, when on his way from his home near the present Berkley bridge to the garrison house in Taunton.

Head-stone of Indian Grave. This head-stone marked the grave of a praying Indian, so called, having been converted to Christianity. The inscription is believed to have been written by Rev. Samuel Danforth in 1688.

Dighton Writing Rock. Situated in Berkley, Mass., on the east bank of Taunton Great river, is, next to Plymouth rock, one of the best known landmarks in America. Its inscriptions up to within a few years have always been thought to have been made by Norsemen, but on the authority of John Fiske of Harvard University, and others, it is now believed the characters were drawn by Algonquin Indians.

Presented to the Old Colony Historical Society by deed by the Royal Society Northern Antiquarians of Copenhagen, January 30, 1889.

Stone Cherub. The stone cherub in Historical Hall was once a part of the ancient tower of St. Mary Magdalen church, Taunton, England. This church was endowed and built in 1308. It has received since several additions as well as a new tower. An early description of the church states, "that the middle aisle of the church had on each side seven pillars, the capitals, if they may be so called, are formed of cherubs. In one of the modern additions this cherub was removed from its ancient place."
